THE OPINION BELOW

There was no reported decision, either official or unofficial, of the Opinion and Decision on Appeal of the Yolo County, California, Superior Court sitting as a state appellate court of last resort. The said Opinion and Decision on Appeal is attached hereto as Appendix I. There was no opinion in the trial court.

STATEMENT OF THE GROUNDS ON WHICH THE JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT IS INVOKED

(1) The Judgment and Appeal Below.

On May 21, 1965, the Justice Court of the Woodland Judicial District of Yolo County, California, denied defendant Tom Harling's Motion For A New Trial and Motion To Set Aside And Arrest The Verdict Of The Jury. On the same day, the Justice Court made and entered its Order Admitting Defendant To Probation which is attached hereto as Appendix II. Thereafter, on May 21, 1965 Notice of Appeal was filed. The Opinion and Decision on Appeal is dated November 29, 1965 and was entered on November 30, 1965. Petitioner's Motion For A New Trial was based inter alia upon the ground of newly discovered evidence as set forth by affidavit which is attached hereto as Appendix III.

(2) The Statutory Provision Believed to Confer on the United States Supreme Court Jurisdiction to Review the Judgment in Question by Writ of Certiorari.

Jurisdiction is conferred by section 1257 (3) of Title 28 of the United States Code which provides:

> "Final judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court as follows:
> . . . (3) By writ of certiorari, where the validity of a treaty or statute of the United States is drawn in question or where the validity of a State statute is drawn in question on the ground of its being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States, or where any title, right, privilege or immunity is specially set up or claimed under the Constitution, treaties or statutes of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States."

California convictions in Justice Courts are reviewable on appeal only in the Superior Court, which consequently becomes the highest court in which a decision may be had.

"In the absence of certification or published opinion, no further appeal" is authorized from the determination of the Appellate Department of the Superior Court in a misdemeanor case. In re Sterling, 63 A.C. 509 at page 510 citing Rule 62(a) of the California Rules of Court. See also *Smith v. Federal power may be invoked to set aside what a State regards as a fair trial if it is plain that a federal right has been invaded. Lisenba v. People of the State of California, 62 S. Ct. 280, 314 U. S. 219, 86 L. Ed. 166, rehearing denied 62 S. Ct. 620, 315 U. S. 826, 86 L. Ed. 1222.

THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

(1) Was petitioner's right to confront witnesses against him as guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, as the same applies to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment, unconstitutionally abridged by the trial court's refusal to allow petitioner the right to question his accuser concerning the paternity of the child?

(2) Was petitioner deprived of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment by a State rule of law which applies one standard of evidence to the case of the prosecution and another standard of evidence to the case of the defense in the same situation?

THE CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS RELIED UPON

(1) Constitution of the United States, Fourteenth Amendment, Due Process Clause:

> ". . . nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; . . ."

(2) Constitution of the United States, Fourteenth Amendment, Equal Protection of the Laws Clause:

> ". . . nor" (shall any State) ". . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

(3) Constitution of the United States, Sixth Amendment (as the protections therein set forth are applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment):

> "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; . . . and to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defense."

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner was charged with a violation of section 270 of the Penal Code of the State of California, a misdemeanor. The crime is generally referred to as "Failure To Provide." After a change of venue from the Esparto Judicial District, the case was tried in the Woodland Judicial District Court before a jury. Petitioner was convicted. Petitioner denied paternity although he admitted relations with the mother but contended that they were at a time when the child could not have been conceived.

Concerning the disputed issue of paternity, the trial court advised defense counsel in chambers, at the request of the prosecutor, that defense counsel was not to make any inquiry concerning other sexual activities on the part of Miss Monarrez (the mother) unless the defense was prepared to prove by way of impeaching evidence in the event of a denial that she did in fact have such relations during the period between January 1, 1964 and March 31, 1964. The trial court in its Settled Statement of Fact (there was no reporter at the trial) sets forth its ruling in this regard as follows:

> "The court ruled that evidence as to acts of sexual relations with Miss Monarrez was limited to the period between January 1, 1964 and March 31, 1964. Defense counsel was limited to making inquiry concerning other sexual activities on the part of Miss Monarrez unless the defense was prepared to prove by way of impeaching evidence in the event of a denial that she did in fact have relations during the period of possible conception." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 5, line 32 through page 6, line 7.)

The trial court did allow defense counsel to ask Miss Monarrez about other boys that she had dated on cross-examination and, in the words of the trial court's Settled Statement of Fact at page 6, lines 12-15:

> "Miss Monarrez testified that she had been out on dates with the following boys: Jerry Harling, Ron Giovanetti, Mike Coulter, Jim Wertman, Dennis Smith, Walter Olson, Brian Crutcher, and Mike Joy".

Because of the trial court's ruling, however, defense counsel was precluded from asking whether she had sexual relations with these boys, or any other boys, during the period of possible conception set by the trial court without being prepared to prove "by way of impeaching evidence in the event of a denial" that she did in fact have relations during the period of possible conception.

Thus foreclosed from cross-examination of the mother by the court as to the paternity of the child by the court's prerequisite of independent impeaching evidence, the defense sought to introduce direct evidence of sexual relations at times when the child could not have been conceived. This offer of proof was made upon the theory that such proof yielded the inference of sexual relations during the crucial conceptive period set by the court. The court denied this offer of proof on the ground that it was not probative to show sexual connection during the conceptive period. However, the prosecution, over defense objection and assignment of misconduct and motion for a mistrial, was allowed to introduce evidence that petitioner and Miss Monarrez had sexual relations at times when the child could not have been conceived as that period was set by the court. This proof was allowed upon the same theory that the court found untenable when advanced by the defense, i.e. that such proof was probative to show sexual connection with the defendant during the conceptive period.

A portion of the People's evidence of sexual relations with petitioner at times when the child could not have been conceived involved direct testimony by Miss Monarrez of the felony of forcible rape by petitioner. Defense objection, assignment of misconduct, and motion for mistrial were made when this testimony was adduced. The court ordered the testimony "stricken" although there was no record from which to strike. Thereafter, "The defense was permitted to allow the defendant to deny force." (Settled Statement of Facts, page 5, lines 31 and 32.)

The defense was not allowed to show evidence of unchastity however which the defense urged was admissible under the California rule that permits such evidence in cases where forcible rape is the main charge and the prosecution presents evidence of such force.

Throughout the trial during argument on the above points of evidence, again in the words of the trial court's Settled Statement of Fact:

> "The court recalls that during argument between counsel before the jury, the prosecutor used some of the following phrases: That defense counsel was 'highly unethical', 'highly unprofessional', 'grossly unprofessional', 'guilty of unprofessional conduct', 'deliberately trying to get before this jury questions that he knows are even improper to ask', 'I don't know whether I can assign misconduct to defendant's counsel or not' and 'I assign defense counsel as being guilty of prejudicial misconduct.'" (Settled Statement of Fact, page 10, lines 24-31.)

Subsequent to the jury verdict of guilt in support of petitioner's Motion For A New Trial, defendant submitted the affidavit of 16 year old Leslie C. Caldwell, Jr. who had dated Miss Monarrez on two occasions subsequent to the baby's birth (Miss Monarrez having been 17 years of age at the time the child was conceived). On one of the dates Miss Monarrez had the child with her and Leslie asked whose baby it was. She replied, "It's Giovannetti's". Ron Giovannetti was one of the boys Miss Monarrez admitted dating but about whom the defense was not allowed to inquire as to sexual relations under the ruling of the trial court foreclosing cross-examination about paternity absent independent impeaching proof by the defense in the event of a denial.

The trial court held and the appellate department of the Superior Court affirmed that the new evidence was insufficient to warrant a new trial. The Superior Court stated in that regard:

> "At the best, insofar as it might be relevant, the new evidence would only have heightened conflicts already in the record or have been cumulative of evidence already adduced." (Opinion and Decision on Appeal, Appendix I, page xi.)

No challenge was ever made to the evidence of the Caldwell boy being offered in good faith as in fact "newly-discovered". In that regard the affidavit reads:

> "I knew nothing about Tom Harling's trial until April 30, 1965 when I heard about it at school. I am a Junior at Woodland High School. I then told my father, Les Caldwell, about what Helen had told me and he said, 'You should talk to Tom and tell what you know to see if you can help.' For that reason I got in touch with Marilyn Warford and asked her to have Tom get in touch with me about what Helen Monarrez had told

Petitioner's contentions herein were raised at the trial level by the foregoing offers of proof, objections, assignment of misconduct and motion for a mistrial. They were also raised upon the Motion For A New Trial and upon the Appeal by oral argument and reference to the record. Pertinent additional portions of the record certified to this Court are excerpted as follows concerning petitioner's contentions:

> "Miss Monarrez testified on direct examination that she did not consent to the act of sexual relations on the first occasion during the Yolo County Fair in 1963. She testified that she went with the defendant in his car into the country at approximately nine or ten at night. He stopped at the Canteen and bought some beer. They started making out—'kissing'. The witness then testified that he 'laid me on the seat', and 'raped me'. Objection by defense counsel was made and sustained by the court. The next question by the prosecutor was 'What did he do next?' The witness answered, 'He tore my underpants'. Objection was again made by defense counsel and an assignment of misconduct was made that such interrogation and evidence was highly prejudicial to the defendant and his rights in that it brought before the jury evidence of the crime of forcible rape at a time when the child could not possibly have been conceived and was of such an inflammatory nature that a mistrial should be granted." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 2, lines 13-28.)
> "Helen Monarrez further testified that the next act of sexual relations occurred on New Years Day, 1964 in Tom's car, and that it was a voluntary act on her part. She further stated that Tom had a bottle of Vodka in his car." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 3, lines 11-14.)

"She testified that the child, Jana Rosalyn Monarrez, born 11-7-64 was conceived on February 18, 1964." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 3, lines 15 and 16.)

"Miss Monarrez testified that the last act of sexual relations with Tom Harling occurred on the Saturday night before Easter Sunday, and that the baby's father was Tom Harling." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 3, lines 25-27.)

"The defense urged the admissibility of the above evidence" (i.e. acts of sexual connection between the defendant's accuser and other men) "upon the grounds that if other acts of intercourse with the defendant at times when the child could not possibly have been conceived were probative to show probable intercourse with the defendant when the child was in fact conceived that then other acts of intercourse with other men were just as probative to show that they might be the father during the period of conception. The defense urged that it was highly prejudicial to allow evidence of the other acts with the defendant as probative to the main charge when they could not possibly yield the pregnancy in question but to preclude acts with other men during the same interim." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 5, lines 11-21.)

"The defense further urged that since the prosecution had brought in evidence of forcible rape and opened up this inquiry . . . that the defense should at least be allowed to neutralize this inflammatory and prejudicial testimony as to an episode entirely collateral to the act of conception which Miss Monarrez contended yielded her pregnancy by proper testimony of her chastity as permitted in cases of forcible rape and any other proper impeachment." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 5, lines 22-29.)

"The court sustained the prosecutor's objections to all of the above testimony." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 5, lines 30 and 31.)

ARGUMENT AND AUTHORITY

(1) PETITIONER'S RIGHT TO CONFRONT WITNESSES AGAINST HIM WAS UNCONSTITUTIONALLY ABRIDGED BY THE TRIAL COURT'S REFUSAL TO ALLOW PETITIONER THE RIGHT TO QUESTION HIS ACCUSER CONCERNING THE PATERNITY OF THE CHILD UNFETTERED BY THE TRIAL COURT'S PRECONDITION THAT PETITIONER HAVE INDEPENDENT PROOF OF SEXUAL CONNECTION BETWEEN THE PROSECUTRIX AND OTHERS DURING THE CONCEPTIVE PERIOD.

It is now clear that the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment is applicable to the States and that a primary interest secured by the Confrontation Clause is the right of cross-examination, Douglas v. State of Alabama, 85 S. Ct. 1074, 380 U. S. 415, 13 L. Ed. 2d 934.

Here the trial court prevented defense counsel from using this primary right of the defendant's to sift the truth of the accusations of Helen Monarrez as to the crucial issue of the paternity of the child by requiring the prerequisite of advance proof from the defense that there was independent admissible evidence which the defense would produce by way of impeachment in the event of a denial. It seems fundamental to petitioner that he should have been able to establish his entire defense to the criminal charge against him by directly asking the prosecutrix about the paternity of the child through questions about her sexual activities in that regard. It is a commonplace that a reasonable doubt as to guilt is often raised by breaking down the testimony of the complaining witness. The trial court effectively cut off any such result by the restriction on cross-examination as to this fundamental issue. The appellate court upheld the trial court in its restriction of the fundamental right of cross-examination in a single paragraph by missing the point entirely and turning the matter on the insufficiency of the impeaching evidence. The appellate department opinion in that regard disposes summarily of petitioner's basic contention that he was denied prejudicially his right to cross-examination on the paternity issue as follows:

> "The 'Settled Statement of Facts' disposes of this contention. There was no showing that the evidence of Dennis Smith would relate to intercourse with Miss Monarrez during the period of possible conception. Nor does it appear any where that the witness Bailey would testify as to Dennis Smith having said at any time that he had intercourse with her at a definite time, particularly during the period of possible conception. The claimed evidence on this, to the contrary, is rather general." (Opinion and Decision on Appeal, Appendix I, page vii.)

The above language was in response to defendant's contention raised in the following language:

> "The court prejudicially refused defense counsel the right to even ask questions concerning sexual relations with Miss Monarrez which might or might not have involved impeachment of a witness subpoenaed by the defense unless the defense could assure the court in advance what the witness' answer might be." (Opinion and Decision on Appeal, Appendix I, page vi.)

The California law, even in a civil case, is clearly to the contrary and would allow the questioning. In Crosat v. Paige, 147 Cal. App. 2d 385 at page 389, Presiding Justice Peters speaks to this point as follows:

> "Another error committed by the trial court should be mentioned. Plaintiff was asked when testifying as an adverse witness under section 2055 of the Code of Civil Procedure, whether she had sexual relations with other men during June and July of 1952. Plaintiff objected on the grounds that the question was 'purely irrelevant, immaterial.' The objection was sustained. On appeal plaintiff seeks to sustain the ruling on the grounds that defendant made no offer of proof. The ruling was clearly erroneous. Evidence of plaintiff's sexual relations with other men at or about the time of conception is admissible. (Estate of Gird, 157 Cal. 534 (108 P. 499, 137 Am. St. Rep. 131); Berry v. Chaplin, 74 Cal. App.2d 652 (169 P.2d 442).) It is equally clear that no offer of proof is necessary where the examination is of an adverse witness. (Tossman v. Newman, 37 Cal.2d 522 (233 P.2d 1); Lawless

v. Calaway, 24 Cal.2d 81 (147 P.2d 604).)" Crosat v. Paige, 147 Cal. App. 2d 385, 305 Pac. 2d 121.

Undue restriction on the right of cross-examination may be violative of the Sixth Amendment. Smith v. U. S., 331 F. 2d 265, certiorari denied 85 S. Ct. 49, 379 U. S. 824, 13 L. Ed. 2d 34, rehearing denied 85 S. Ct. 321, 379 U. S. 940, 13 L. Ed. 2d 350.

Petitioner's research has revealed no known authority for the proposition that the accusing witness in a case where paternity is in issue may not be cross-examined on the paternity issue in defense of such accusation. The cases to the contrary are legion. See for example: Twining v. State, 198 A. 2d 291 (Md. 1964), holding that some latitude must be allowed to a defendant in a bastardy case in order to protect one falsely accused and further that the mother may be interrogated regarding intercourse that might yield paternity and Commonwealth v. Harbaugh, 191 A. 2d 844 (Pa. Super. 1963) holding that countervailing evidence is admissible whether achieved by cross-examination or otherwise. To the same effect: Commonwealth v. Johnson, 58 Sch. L.R. 48 as cited in West's General Digest 1963, bastardy, section 59; I. v. D., 158 A. 2d 716, (N.J. Super. A.D.)

The holding of the trial court that defense counsel might elicit from the prosecutrix the names of boys she admitted dating but could not ask her whether or not she had relations with these same boys without an advance showing of independent impeaching evidence in the event of a denial is unsupportable. The only purpose of such admissions as to dating would be to yield the availability as to sexual connection with the defendant's accuser. Direct inquiry into such sexual relations was unconstitutionally precluded in this case rendering without substance petitioner's right to confrontation by cross-examination guaranteed to him under the United States Constitution.

(2) PETITIONER WAS DEPRIVED OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW AND OF THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS BY A STATE RULE OF EVIDENCE WHICH APPLIED ONE STANDARD OF EVIDENCE TO THE CASE OF THE PROSECUTION AND ANOTHER STANDARD OF EVIDENCE TO THE CASE OF THE DEFENSE IN THE SAME SITUATION.

The prosecution's charge was that on or about October 22, 1964 defendant Tom Harling was the father of an unborn child of Helen Monarrez and that he "wilfully and unlawfully" omitted "without lawful excuse to furnish medical attendance to . . . the unborn child." (A copy of the complaint is attached hereto as Appendix IV.) Tom Harling's defense was that he was not the father of the child because, except for a visit to the doctor's office with his mother, he was ill at home on February 18, 1964 which was the date that Helen Monarrez fixed as the date of conception. The defendant's mother so testified corroborating his contention. The medical doctor who treated petitioner on February 18, 1964 also testified corroborating that fact.

The trial court fixed the date of possible conception between January 1, 1964 and March 31, 1964 and then applied the California evidence rules which apply one standard to the prosecution's case and yet another standard to the defense case involving the same type of evidence. The Tweedledum and Tweedledee approach of the California cases as approved by the trial court and the Superior Court sitting as an appellate court in a situation where the inferences from proven facts are identical is as follows:

(a) The prosecution was allowed to show acts of sexual connection between Tom Harling and Helen Monarrez at times other than the period of possible conception set by the trial court. The rationale of allowing such evidence was that:

> "It appears that the evidence complained of was properly admissible as having a bearing on and tending to prove the commission of the crime charged against the defendant. An essential element here, of course, is paternity. Certainly, evidence of sexual intercourse tends to show paternity and evidence of intercourse by Miss Monarrez and defendant prior to the period concerned here (within the not remote past) tended to substantiate the occurence (sic) of intercourse by them at the time of claimed conception. Evidence of previous intercourse is competent to show the probability of the particular act having occured. (sic) (Berry v. Chaplin, 74 Cal. App. (2d) 652; People v. Brazil, 112 Cal. App. 326)" (Opinion and Decision on Appeal, Appendix I, page v.)

(b) The defense however was NOT allowed to show evidence of acts of previous intercourse between Helen Monarrez and other men based upon precisely the same theory of admissibility, i.e. that "Evidence of previous intercourse" with men other than the defendant was just as competent to show that intercourse with the other men also continued on into and during the period of conception as set by the trial court to establish the defense contention "that the particular act" of conception occurred not with the defendant but with another man, or to at least raise the necessary reasonable doubt in that regard.

In a complete about face in reasoning the appellate court sustained the trial court's refusal to allow such evidence and applied an entirely contrary rule when it was the defense, rather than the prosecution, which sought to adduce the evidence of previous acts of intercourse in holding that:

> "The cases clearly establish that it is improper to show intercourse of the mother with other men at times other than at or about the time of conception. (8 Cal. Jur. (2d) 252) The time of possible conception was clearly established in this case." (Opinion and Decision on Appeal, Appendix I, page vi.)

The case of People v. Brazil, 112 Cal. App. 326, 296 Pac. 639 cited by the appellate court as yielding the admissibility of the prosecution's evidence also involved a prosecution under Penal Code section 270 wherein paternity was in issue. The Court in Brazil held that acts of intercourse before the alleged act resulting in conception were admissible as probative of intercourse during the conceptive period. In doing so, the Court in Brazil relied upon the 1901 California Supreme Court decision of People v. Castro, 133 Cal. 12, 65 Pac. 13, which held that acts of sexual connection "both before and after the particular act charged" might be shown "to sustain the main allegation" (Emphasis supplied.) The Court in Castro declared at page 12:

> "The doctrine appears to be fairly well settled, that in actions of adultery, seduction etc., evidence of sexual intercourse between the parties, both before and after the particular act charged, may be introduced in evidence as tending to sustain the main allegation." (Emphasis added.)

The Court in deciding the Brazil case also relied on the buttressing and extending language of People v. Koller, 142 Cal. 621, 76 Pac. 500, 502, an incest case, under which the California Supreme Court holds with reference to the above rule from Castro:

> "We think this is a correct statement of the prevailing rule, and in principle applies, not only in prosecutions for adultery, but in prosecutions for all cognate offenses involving sexual intercourse by consent, including incest."

If the reasoning in Castro, Koller, and Brazil is the law, as it must be, then due process of law and equal protection of the laws demands that the same rule of law be applied to the evidence of the defense as well as the evidence of the State. If the acts of the defendant with his accuser at other times when the child could not possibly have been conceived were found, as they were, to be probative in the prosecution's case to show that there was probably an act or acts during the period of possible conception, then the acts of other men with Helen Monarrez before and after the period of conception were just as probative to show that there were probably an act or acts with these same other men during the period of possible conception. The trial court denied such evidence when presented from the defense side of the counsel table but allowed such evidence on the part of the People. The defense offer of proof in this regard follows:

"The defense made the following offer of proof outside the presence of the jury:

1. That Jerry Harling would testify that he had relations with Helen Monarrez before his brother, the defendant, but that this was not within the period allowed by the court.

2. That Mike Kolb would testify that he had sexual relations with Helen Monarrez but not within the period allowed by the court. Both the Kolb and Jerry Harling testimony were as to times prior to the birth of the child in question.

3. That Dennis Smith had advised defense counsel that he had had relations with Miss Monarrez but not as to the date thereof. That on the eve of the trial the said Dennis Smith had called defense counsel advising him that he, Dennis Smith, planned to repudiate what he formerly stated as to sexual relationship and would testify that he had not had relations at all. That defense counsel had stated that he planned to call him to the witness stand to obtain his testimony under oath and that he assumed that he, Dennis Smith, would tell the truth.

4. That the defense had all three of the above witnesses under subpoena and, in addition, a witness named LeRoy Bailey who had heard the said Dennis Smith make an admission that he (Dennis Smith) had had relations with Helen Monarrez

'quite recently' before she announced that she was pregnant but that 'you have to watch out, it has the crabs.'

5. It was stipulated that the above offer of proof was properly made and that the witnesses need not be sworn and asked questions." (Settled Statement of Fact, page 4, line 16 through page 5, line 10.)

That a state rule of evidence may operate to deny an accused the rights guaranteed to him under the United States Constitution is no longer an open question. Griffin v. California, ..... U.S. ....., 14 L. Ed. 2d 106, 85 S. Ct. ..... Petitioner urges that the Fourteenth Amendment envisions and demands even-handed application of the rules of evidence to equally protect the rights of the accused in the presentation of his defense as well as to protect the prosecution in achieving justice for the State and that he was deprived of such protection in this case.*

*Of significance is the California doctrine of collateral estoppel which precludes petitioner from ever again challenging the paternity of the child, either in a civil action or another criminal trial. Thus, although the extant probation order is for only two years, the fact that paternity may never again be placed in issue by petitioner yields the result that to maintain his probation status (as it may be reinstated in other cases involving the same offense) petitioner must pay a total of $7,958.48 as a result of this misdemeanor conviction ($30.00 per month child support until age 21 plus $202.00 for the doctor and $196.48 for the hospital) and even more if the monthly support amount as a condition of probation be increased. See Teitelbaum Furs v. Dominion Insurance Company, 58 Cal. 2d 601, 375 Pac. 2d 439 and People v. Beltran, 94 Cal. App. 2d 197, 210 Pac. 2d 238.

CONCLUSION

Although the offense involved was only a misdemeanor, defendant was constitutionally entitled to a fair trial in a fair tribunal as a basic requirement of due process of law. An opportunity to be heard must necessarily embody the right to meaningful cross-examination and the right to equal-handed application of the rules of evidence to the prosecution and defense alike. Holt v. Virginia, ..... U.S. ....., 14 L. Ed. 2d 290, 85 S. Ct. ....., and cases there cited. Petitioner did not receive such a fair trial in the Woodland Justice Court.

Dated, Woodland, California,
January 24, 1966.

Respectfully submitted,
HARRY A. ACKLEY,
Attorney for Petitioner.

In the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the County of Yolo

No. 2997

The People of the State of California, Plaintiff,
vs.
Thomas Harling,
Defendant.

OPINION AND DECISION ON APPEAL

Hearing of the Appeal from Woodland Judicial District in the above entitled matter was held on August 13, 1965, and submitted to the Court. The Court has considered all the record, including the various briefs of the parties.

In the following opinion the Court will give consideration to all the grounds and points raised by defendant in his appeal. It finds that none of the Grounds specified in the Statement of Appeal are sufficient and that the judgment of the lower court must be affirmed.

Hereinafter the Court considers the briefs and arguments and specified grounds set up by defendant by treating, in turn, each of the specifications of alleged error set forth by defendant as "Contentions" at page 11, line 20, through page 14, line 1, of defendant's Statement on Appeal. Each is discussed under the number given it by defendant; i.e., Contention I, Contention II, etc., and in each instance defendant's contention is set forth.

I.

Defendant's Contention I: The Court erred in allowing Helen Monarrez to remain in the courtroom when she was a witness and not an officer nor the victim of the alleged offense.

There was no error in allowing Miss Monarrez to remain in the Courtroom while excluding all other witnesses. The Court has the discretion to permit some witnesses to remain in the Courtroom while excluding others. It may except one or more witnesses from the operation of an order for exclusion. Such things lie within the discretion of the Court. (48 Cal. Jur. (2d) 356) Unless there was a patent, undeniably, prejudicial abuse of such discretion, the Trial Court's discretion must control. Such prejudicial abuse does not appear here.

II.

Defendant's Contention II: The Court deprived defendant of his legal right to the defense of mistake of fact under Penal Code Section 26 (Four) by refusing defendant's submitted instruction thereon in the exact language of CALJIC Instruction No. 71-B.

Defendant's claim that he was denied his legal right to defense of mistake of fact under Penal Code Section 26 (4) by the refusal of defendant's submitted instruction thereon in the language of CALJIC Instruction No. 71-B is without merit.

It is true that "wilfulness" is an essential element of the crime charged. (People v. Swiggy, 69 Cal. App. 574) Here, however, defendant is arguing only on construction of the evidence. There is evidence which would belie defendant's paternity of the child. There is evidence also that supports a finding of paternity. Obviously, the jury believed the latter and so found. Of course, the jury also determined his "wilfulness" as required for the commission of the crime. This "wilfulness" could not possibly be belied by any "mistaken" belief that he had in non-intercourse. The jury must have believed he did have such intercourse. This being so, any claim he had of non-intercourse or of belief in non-intercourse could not possibly be considered a "mistake of fact" or as disproving criminal intent. (People v. Fitzpatrick, 78 Cal. App. 37)

III., IV., V.

Defendant's Contention III: The Court prejudicially failed to instruct the jury as to the purpose of the testimony permitted upon direct examination of the other crimes shown of statutory rape, contributing to the delinquency of a minor and furnishing liquor to a minor.

Defendant's Contention IV: The Court prejudicially failed to instruct the jury as to the purpose of the testimony permitted upon direct examination of the crime of forcible rape at a time when the child could not possibly have been conceived under the Court's limiting period of between January 1, 1964 and March 31, 1964.

Defendant's Contention V: The Court prejudicially erred in refusing to grant defendant's motion for a mistrial when the Deputy District Attorney adduced evidence of forcible rape of the complaining witness by the defendant at a time when the child could not possibly have been conceived and in failing to give any instructions as to the purpose of this evidence.

From the "Settled Statement of Facts" in the record it appears that in the direct examination of the complaining witness, Miss Monarrez, questioning by the Assistant District Attorney did elicit answers that at the time of the 1963 Yolo County Fair defendant "laid me on the seat" and "raped me," and "tore my underpants." However, objection to this was sustained by the Court and the testimony was stricken and the jury was admonished to disregard such testimony. The testimony which was stricken and which the jury was admonished to disregard concerned a time outside the possible period of conception. It appears, however, from the "Settled Statement" that, despite the sustaining of objections on direct examination, and the admonition to the jury, defendant cross-examined the witness on this incident and elicited much of the material of which he now complains.

In view of the strength of other evidence presented in this case, and since the Court adequately admonished the jury, and even after the admonition defendant pursued the subject by questions related thereto, it cannot be said that the above testimony of Miss Monarrez was prejudicially erroneous. (See cases collected in 4 Cal. Jur. (2d)—Appeal and Error, Sec. 623 and 624, p. 505, et seq.)

Obviously, no instruction to the jury, apart from the admonition, was required. The Trial Court's refusal to grant defendant's motion for a new trial on grounds concerning the above was proper.

Complaint is made also of failing to instruct the jury as to the purpose of testimony of other crimes, of statutory rape, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and furnishing liquor to a minor. It appears that the evidence complained of was properly admissible as having a bearing on and tending to prove the commission of the crime charged against defendant. An essential element here, of course, is paternity. Certainly, evidence of sexual intercourse tends to show paternity and evidence of intercourse by Miss Monarrez and defendant prior to the period concerned here (within the not remote past) tended to substantiate the occurrence of intercourse by them at the time of claimed conception. Evidence of previous intercourse is competent to show the probability of the particular act having occurred. (Berry v. Chaplin, 74 Cal. App. (2) 652; People v. Brazil, 112 Cal. App. 326)

There is nothing in the record to indicate that a limiting instruction concerning the above was requested by defendant. There is no duty on the Court, absent request, to give such an instruction. (Witkin: California Criminal Procedure, 477, 478, 479, 492 et seq.)

VI.

Defendant's Contention VI: The Court prejudicially erred in refusing the defendant the right to present evidence of the unchastity of the mother by cross-examination and independent evidence to counter the evidence of forcible rape brought out by the prosecution. Although allowing the defendant to testify that he used no force on the prosecuting witness, since the defendant was entitled to counter by all proper evidence the denied consent of the prosecuting witness to the contention on her part that force was used.

There is no merit to this claim. The cases clearly establish that it is improper to show intercourse of the mother with other men at times other than at or about the time of conception. (8 Cal. Jur. (2d) 252) The time of possible conception was clearly established in this case.

VII.

Defendant's Contention VII: The Court prejudicially refused defense counsel the right to even ask questions concerning sexual relations with Miss Monarrez which might or might not have involved impeachment of a witness subpoenaed by the defense unless the defense could assure the Court in advance what the witness' answer might be.

The "Settled Statement of Facts" disposes of this contention. There was no showing that the evidence of Dennis Smith would relate to intercourse with Miss Monarrez during the period of possible conception. Nor does it appear any where that the witness

Bailey would testify as to Dennis Smith having said at any time that he had intercourse with her at a definite time, particularly during the period of possible conception. The claimed evidence on this, to the contrary, is rather general.

VIII., IX., X.

Defendant's Contention VIII: The Court prejudicially erred in refusing to grant the defense motion for an advisory verdict of acquittal or, in the alternative, for dismissal for failure to establish the corpus delicti at the close of the prosecution's case.

Defendant's Contention IX: The Court abused its discretion in permitting the prosecution to reopen on the last day of trial to establish an element of the corpus delicti which the Court had previously ruled was already present.

Defendant's Contention X: There is no evidence in the record of the establishment of a necessary element of the corpus delicti, namely that the medical attendance which the defendant allegedly failed to furnish was in fact necessary for the unborn child as distinguished from the mother.

The corpus delicti was established by the prosecution. Whether this was done before the prosecution was permitted to reopen its case in chief or after is really not material. However, it does appear that all necessary elements were established prior to the reopening. The reopening, of course, was entirely within the discretion of the Trial Court. Defendant ignores the fact that the Court could, in its discretion, allow the prosecution's case in chief to be reopened to buttress its case instead of for supplying missing elements of the corpus delicti.

The complaint before the Court, and upon which trial was held, charged that defendant "did wilfully and unlawfully omit without lawful excuse to furnish medical attendance to Helen Monarrez, and the unborn child," a violation of Penal Code Section 270. Within the provisions of Penal Code Sections 959 and 960 there seems to have been no prejudice to defendant in the form of the complaint. The jury was instructed on Section 270 insofar as it relates to the child. It is true that this instruction concerns a much broader field than mere lack of "medical attention" to the infant. However, the record supports a finding that there was no furnishing of medical attention by defendant to the child at the time concerned. As a matter of fact, this is strengthened by the showing that there was no furnishing at the time of delivery as well, both of which services were attested to by Dr. Sobeck. The failure of defendant to furnish such medical attendance was testified to by Miss Monarrez.

Wilfulness and lack of lawful excuse are presumed from the evidence of omission by defendant to furnish the medical attendance. (Penal Code Sec. 270)

The establishment of paternity has already been discussed.

The evidence, fairly construed, does show that the corpus delicti was established.

XI.

Defendant's Contention XI: The Court prejudicially erred in failing to allow the defense to establish evidence shown by defendant's offers of proof.

The various offers of proof made by defendant (in addition to those already considered) have been reviewed. The Court had restricted (properly) the evidence of intercourse by Miss Monarrez with others than defendant to a definite period. The law on this has been discussed previously. The offers of proof of intercourse of others with her at other times were properly rejected.

The offer of proof concerning testimony of one Dennis Smith and of other witnesses concerning statements of said Smith was properly rejected. The crux of this offer has been discussed hereinabove.

There was no prejudice or error in the ruling of the Court on the offer of proof concerning the testimony of Bill D. White.

XII.

Defendant's Contention XII: The Deputy District Attorney was guilty of prejudicial misconduct before the jury in misstating the evidence in argument, in repeatedly personally attacking defense counsel, asking degrading and irrelevant questions of the defendant on cross examination, in bringing out evidence of other irrelevant crimes of the defendant without stated purpose or submitted limiting instruction, in arguing the necessity of support payments to the jury, in arguing age discrepancy, mismatch, animal act, animal passion, an act of pure lust, no love on the part of the defendant and similar characterization, in improperly asking his own witnesses if they were telling the truth and if they knew the meaning of the oath.

The actions and statements of the Assistant District Attorney in this case were far from exemplary. However, while not condoning them, the Court cannot say that any one of them, or the aggregate of them, constituted prejudicial error. Undoubtedly, they were vexatious. The Trial Court exercised proper discretion in the handling of these matters when objection was made thereto. The vexation caused and the poor impression that such matters may have had on the jury, are more than offset by the strength of the case against defendant.

XIII.

Defendant's Contention XIII: The complaint improperly charges and the verdict improperly finds the defendant guilty of failing to provide for Helen Monarrez which is not a crime in the State of California.

The complaint herein charges non-support of "Helen Monarrez, and the unborn child." The jury was instructed only on non-support of the child. The whole trial proceeded on that basis. There seemed to be no doubt about that—at any time during the trial, while evidence on the paternity issue, on the lack of furnishing of medical attendance, or on other matters was presented. The verdict is simply of guilt of violation of Penal Code Sec. 270.

A fair degree of liberality in pleading is permitted under Penal Code Sec. 959 and 960. No substantial right of defendant was infringed.

See: Penal Code Sec. 956, 957, 959, 960. In re Messner, 30 Cal. App. (2) 290.

XIV.

Defendant's Contention XIV: The Court should have granted defendant's motion for a new trial upon the above grounds and upon the affidavit of Leslie C. Caldwell, Jr., as to newly-discovered evidence which could not, with due diligence, have been discovered and produced by the defendant upon trial and which is material to the defendant in that it involved a direct admission by the prosecuting witness that someone else is the father of the child in question.

In the absence of abuse, the Court must abide by the discretion of the Trial Court in refusing to grant a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence. There appears to have been no abuse of discretion here sufficient to hold the Trial Court in error. At the best, insofar as it might be relevant, the new evidence would only have heightened conflicts already in the record or have been cumulative of evidence already adduced.

There appears to be no merit in any of the grounds specified as being relied upon by appellant on this appeal. (Page 1, line 21 to Page 2, line 1, of Defendant's Statement on Appeal.) Accordingly, the judgment of the Trial Court is affirmed.

AFFIDAVIT OF WITNESS RE NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE

State of California
County of Yolo—ss.

Leslie C. Caldwell, Jr., being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

My name is Leslie C. Caldwell, Jr. I am sixteen years of age. I reside with my parents at 1246 Donnelly Circle, Woodland, California. My telephone number is 662-0172.

I have had two dates with Helen Monarrez and I have known her about two months. I first met her in the Thrifty Drug Store parking lot in Woodland, California at or about 3:30 p.m. on or about March 15, 1965. At that time I was with Jerry Hubert who has also dated Helen Monarrez. Jerry Hubert was with Yvonne Haley on March 15, 1965 and he introduced me to Helen. Helen had her baby with her when I met her.

After meeting Helen, she, Yvonne, and Jerry and me all got into Jerry's car and parked there in the Thrifty Parking Lot. Jerry and Yvonne were making out in the front seat and I was in the back seat with Helen just talking to her. By making out I mean kissing. The baby was in between Helen and me on the back seat at this time.

I said to Helen during the conversation: "Whose baby is it?" She replied: "It's Giovannetti's." She never at any time told me that it was Tom Harling's or anyone else's. I had a second date with Helen about a week later. Jerry Hubert and Yvonne were along too. We just rode around out in the country and back in town. We did not talk about the baby on that date.

I knew nothing about Tom Harling's trial until April 30, 1965 when I heard about it at school. I am a Junior at Woodland High School. I then told my father, Les Caldwell, about what Helen had told me and he said, "You should talk to Tom and tell him what you know to see if you can help." For that reason I got in touch with Marilyn Warford and asked her to have Tom get in touch with me about what Helen Monarrez had told me.

If I were called to the stand and sworn as a witness I would testify to the above facts.
